Wider Caribbean Sea Turtle Conservation Network

September 2012

To Whom it May Concern,

Poaching, habitat destruction, and low levels of public awareness continue to thwart sea turtle conservation efforts in Panama. Thoughtful, community-based initiatives to reduce these threats are sorely needed. We are aware that Project Tigre Salvaje(*) is soliciting funding and volunteers to support their sea turtle conservation and protection efforts in Punta Burica, and that these efforts are conforming to best practices as developed by the Wider Caribbean Sea Turtle Conservation Network (WIDECAST). We would encourage donors, volunteers, and other supporters to join the Project's efforts and to forge enduring partnerships with all those who are working so diligently to ensure the survival of sea turtles on Panama's Pacific coast.

Thank you!

Kind Regards,

Dr. Karen Eckert
WIDECAST Executive Director
